Architectural Education

Not All Degrees Are Created Equally

The education requirement can vary from state to state. In order to be licensed in many jurisdictions, an applicant must hold a degree from a program accredited by the National Architectural Accrediting Board (NAAB). Other states do not require a degree from an NAAB-accredited program.

There are two types of non professional degrees in architecture

Associates of Applied Science - 2 year degree

Many students transfer into an upper division school although they may be required to take additional design studios.

Bachelor of Technology in Architecture – 4 year degree

There is one type of Pre-professional degree in architecture

Bachelor of Science in Architecture – 4 year degree.

Typically the student goes on to a two-year Master of Architecture program.

Architectural Education

Not All Degrees Are Created Equally

There are several types of professional degrees in architecture.

A five-year Bachelor of Architecture program is intended for students entering from high school or who have no previous architecture training.

A two-year Master of Architecture program has been developed for students who hold pre-professional undergraduate degrees in architecture or a related area (engineering, landscape architecture, etc.).

Three- or four-year Master of Architecture programs have been developed for students with a degree in another discipline.
